

Lady Irene Beauty Shoppe Opens In Ogden

A black and white photograph of a classroom interior. In the foreground, there are several wooden desks and chairs. A small table with a lamp is on the left. In the background, there are more desks, a chalkboard, and a doorway. A small illustration of a woman and a child is in the top left corner.

The management made known today that, with the help of the local business firms, a beautiful shop, artistically decorated and equipped is now open to appointments in the local field of beauty culture. With the arrival of several additional operating chairs, which are expected daily, the shop will be one of the largest in the city.

Neither Mrs. Clair nor Mrs. Dodson is taking sides in the affairs at hand. Their main job is to hold their representative feminine contingents together.

There is grave danger in Missouri that the Democratic women will take too decided a stand upon Senator Reed's candidacy. Not only has he proposed many measures which women have advocated in the senate, but he is bitterly opposed by former President Wilson, upon whom the women generally look as the great leader of the party. Within the past week, the term "a Wilson plot" has registered to an uncomfortable degree in the minds of Missouri women voters.

UPSET IN RANKS

There has been a great upset in the feminine Republican ranks in St. Louis, a stronghold of Republicanism in the state. This has been caused by the revival of the old presidential campaign scandal connected with Goldstein and Babler when the senate held up and even voted finally to withdraw the nomination of Goldstein as collector of internal revenue at St. Louis. The Goldstein faction in St. Louis has been removed from power and the reorganization of the women is taking place under the direction of Mrs. Madison, representing the Republican state committee.

Women connected with the Washington headquarters of the Women Voters league, are just now coming up for air after the strenuous week they have passed through in conducting their convention and the Pan-American conference.

The headquarters staff is congratulating itself that everything came off so beautifully at the convention except for a few minor incidents. The train edies connected with these minor incidents are beginning to show their humorous sides now. There was the tragedy of the evening when Lady Astor spoke on the Century roof and 200 delegates, some of whom had come all the way from the Pacific Coast, were unable because of the crowds, to get in and hear Lady Astor. One woman particularly boiled over when she was turned away from the door by a member on guard there. As she galled back down the corridor she was boiling exactly like a teapot.

settle. One of the headquarters staff happened to be near her. "Who is that woman at the door?" she demanded malevolently. "Why that Cerberus," smilingly answered the headquarters staff member. But the delegate was in no mood to understand classical allusions. "Is it Miss Mrs. Cerberus?" she demanded.

Of course, gentle reader, you know all about Cerberus but it won't matter if it is reiterated that Cerberus is the hound that guards the gate of Hades. I confess I had to look it up.

IT'S OLD STUFF
And now it develops that Francis Willard in 1887 inveighed against the prototype of the modern flapper, ex-corialing particularly the "shameful public disrobing, the naked arms and the whirling dance." All this was printed in a W. C. T. U. pamphlet which was distributed by the

the old darlings possessed of a sense of humor. This particular member of the W. C. T. U. does not think the modern flapper is any worse than the

She pointed out the old-time custom of kissing games, indulged in by adults, and the hoop skirts which would tilt now and then to an unreasonable angle, and to the old-time horse and buggy which gave as much opportunity for "petting parties" as the modern and much criticized automobile.

Women pioneers in the professions are going to have a prominent part in the dedication ceremonies of the national woman's party's new headquarters on Capitol Hill. May 21. Just a remnant of the real pioneers are left because it has been a generation ago that women began in numbers to force their way into what was considered the man's world. Among them will be the first woman clergyman in this country, the Rev. Olympic Brown, who is more than 50 years old. There will be a number of women of various ages and backgrounds.

will be younger women, of course—“first women” to push their way in trades and professions which until recently have been considered the exclusive property of men. Following this contingent in the pageant will be a group of young high school girls carrying a banner containing the inscription "Youth is Knocking at the Gates."

Among the trades and professions to be represented in the pageant by women will be actresses, artists, business women, clergymen, dentists, lawyers, musicians, singers, teachers, wage earners, waiters.
